Each session will include panels of expert commentators covering vital topics important to Utah today:

Land Use 2020: Covid, Race, and Stress.

Wednesday, October 21, 2020 – 10 a.m.

Nicole Cottle, Moderator

What are the immediate and long-term effects of the triple whammy that 2020 has brought? What will land use regulation look like two years from now? With commercial real estate in a down cycle, evictions trending higher, and new residents coming to Utah from both coasts, what should we brace ourselves for next?

Bargaining for Development.

Wednesday, October 28, 2020 – 10 a.m.

Jodi Hoffman, Moderator

Negotiating development and annexation agreements, planning for strategic zone changes, and anticipating referenda will be discussed. In today's world, how does a project succeed? What are the new roles of the City Council, the developer, and the neighbors today?

The Politics of Annexation.

Wednesday, November 4, 2020 – 10 a.m.

Brent Bateman, Moderator

In the wake of recent dust-ups over annexation our panel will discuss what the current law allows cities and towns to do in preparing for growth beyond the current city limits. How should local governments work with each other on these issues?

The End of Single-Family Zoning?

Wednesday, November 11, 2020—10 a.m.

Wilf Sommerkorn, Moderator

Single-family zoning is now a national campaign issue. The concerns about adequate and affordable housing have escalated. Municipalities struggle to find new ways to deal with public involvement in making decisions or challenging them. How are successful cities coping with these and other compelling issues in 2020? Join us for a conversation on this and other topics concerning Utah Zoning in the 20's.

Ethics and Professionalism Session

Wednesday, November 18, 2020 – 10 a.m.

Gary Crane, Moderator

In these fractured and unpredictable times, what should land use professionals be most aware of when attempting to act ethically and professionally, both with other professionals, with elected officials, and with the public?
